

1. What does your business do and who are your customers?

KNL Seal is a South African nightlife safety brand focused on preventing drink spiking through simple, discreet and accessible drink protection. Our flagship product is a one-time-use drink cover that helps people take an active role in protecting their drinks while still enjoying their night out.

Our primary customers are young adults, university students, nightlife-goers, festival attendees and event audiences, particularly people who want to feel safer without compromising the social experience of going out.

We also operate B2B, working with clubs, bars, festivals, universities, event organisers, brands and hospitality venues that want to make safer nightlife part of their environment and culture.

KNL Seal is not positioned around fear. We want safety to feel normal, social, stylish and empowering. The brand sits at the intersection of nightlife, culture, safety and community.

What do you want the website to achieve?

The website should be our digital home and strongest representation of the KNL Seal(company name) or seal (brand).

We want it to:

- Clearly explain what KNL Seal is and how it works
- Make the product immediately understandable and desirable
- Build trust and credibility
- Encourage people to buy/use KNL Seal
- Attract venues, festivals, universities and organisations interested in partnering with us
- Introduce our Keyholder/ambassador ecosystem
- Showcase our activations, partnerships and impact
- Give people a way to share their experiences and connect with the movement
- Position KNL Seal as a serious, innovative South African brand with potential to scale internationally

Most importantly, the website should make someone think:

“This is something I want with me when I go out.”

We want the website to feel premium, modern, culturally relevant and memorable, rather than like a conventional safety or medical website.

What pages and features do you need?

We'd like the website to be relatively clean, but with enough depth to grow with the business.

1. Home
 - Strong brand statement
 - Product introduction
 - How it works
 - Why it matters
 - Brand/impact story

 - Our vision for safer nightlife

6. Impact / Stories

7. Contact

 - Partnership enquiries

- Social links

Features we'd like:

- Mobile-first responsive design
- Smooth scrolling and transitions
- Subtle animations/micro-interactions
- Interactive product demonstration
- Video integration
- Forms for partnerships and enquiries
- E-commerce/order functionality, either initially or built with scalability in mind
- Social media integration
- Analytics
- SEO foundations
- CMS so we can update content ourselves

Creative detail is important to us. We are interested in subtle sound design and small interaction details where appropriate — for example, a very understated sound or visual response when interacting with the Seal/brand mark, rather than constant background music or excessive animation.

The website should feel alive, but still sophisticated.

What content/assets do you already have?

We already have the foundations of the KNL Seal brand, including:

- KNL Seal logo/brand identity
- Product concepts and product visuals
- Product photography/content
- Brand messaging and taglines
- Founder story
- Social media content
- Information about the product and how it works
- Research and educational information around drink spiking
- Existing social media presence

We are still developing additional professional product photography, video content, lifestyle imagery, animations and campaign assets, so we'd like the website to be designed in a way that allows these to be incorporated as the brand develops.

We also want the site to have a strong visual identity rather than relying heavily on generic stock imagery.

5. Do you have any websites you like the look/functionality of?

We like websites that feel editorial, premium, minimal and highly intentional. We are drawn to brands that use typography, negative space, motion, imagery and interaction to create a strong identity rather than relying on excessive graphics.

We like:

- Minimal but impactful layouts
- Strong typography
- Dark/contrasting visual environments
- Editorial-style photography
- Cinematic product presentation
- Subtle motion
- Micro-interactions
- Unexpected but tasteful transitions
- Strong storytelling through scrolling
- Interactive product demonstrations
- Websites that feel like an experience, rather than simply a collection of pages

For KNL Seal specifically, we'd like to explore a visual language around the Seal / locking / protection / nightlife / movement without making the website feel overly literal.

We don't want:

- A generic corporate website
- A typical "women's safety" website
- Excessive purple/pink safety branding
- Fear-based imagery
- Too many animations
- Clutter
- Stock photos that don't feel authentic
- Anything that makes the product feel clinical or like a medical/safety device

The overall feeling should be:

"Nightlife, but smarter. Safety, but stylish, but still appropriate for corporate. We young and turnt but we professionals

We care deeply about the details. We want the website to have the kind of small interactions, transitions, sound cues and visual moments that users may not consciously identify, but that collectively make the experience feel premium, considered and distinctly KNL Seal.

KNL Seal should feel like a nightlife brand that happens to solve a serious safety problem — not a safety organisation trying to look like a nightlife brand.

That distinction is very important for the brand you're building.
